

Thursday, 22 July, 1858.

Dear Garrison,

90 I send you a letter from Smith, just received. You will see that my last, intended to make him more placable, only made him more angry. I am sorry ~~such~~ my efforts with him have been so fruitless. He is very bitter toward you. I am not ashamed of my part of the correspondence, which of course ends here.

Please return this letter of Smith promptly, and oblige Yours, faithfully,

Oliver Johnson

Dear Garrison

I send you a letter from George's first received. You will see that my last intention to make him more pleasant, and make him more agreeable. I am very glad of effort with him have been so patient. He is very little toward you. I am not satisfied of my part of the correspondence, and of course in love.

D. J. 12.4 - July 22, 1855

Yours affectionately
Charles Johnson
